Elliot Ackerman has written a beautiful novel that is both a journey into the Afghani struggle for peace in the midst of civil war juxtaposed with the struggle for a young Afghani's destiny. Aziz is a child in a remote village in post-9/11 Afghanistan, and his story, and that of his elder brother Ali, is told in his voice.

Green on Blue is a remarkable achievement, a novel of war, betrayal, love, and honor that feels equally timeless and timely. Aleksander Solzhenitsyn once wrote that the line dividing good and evil doesn't run between nations, but through every human heart. Elliot Ackerman traces that shifting line with enormous empathy and intelligence."

Green on Blue Summary | SuperSummary

Elliot Ackerman, who served five tours of military duty in Iraq and Afghanistan, knows the territory and has not, it would seem, come away with feelings of national accomplishment. The novel's one American character, Mr. Jack, a great blond creature shelling out dollars and medicine and driving an enormous truck, is rarely spotted by the reader.
