Teen court participation also typically requires a formal or informal admission of guilt, which means it's hard to compare it to the traditional court system. And, since teen court is designed for first-time offenders with low-level offenses, recidivism rates are low to begin with.

~~In Teen Court, Kids Have A Right To A Jury Of Their Peers~~

Teen Court is an opportunity for teens to avoid the formal court system while also being held accountable for their actions. Defendants are taught about the consequences of illegal behavior, the judicial process and the legal system. They learn how their peers feel about crime and what they believe to be fair and appropriate consequences.

A teen court is a problem-solving court within the juvenile justice system where teens charged with certain types of offenses can be sentenced by a jury of same-aged peers. Their purpose is to provide an alternative disposition for juveniles who have committed a delinquent act, have committed a minor offense, or have been charged with a misdemeanor, and are otherwise eligible for diversion. Depending on their training, community support, and agreements with traditional court systems, most teen o

Teen Court empowers youth to work on ways to reduce crime and violence in their schools and communities. "It's been found that a youth violator of the law is less likely to repeat the harms done when a jury of their peers decides the appropriate punishment," Dr. Tim Beam, Lincoln County Schools director of federal programs, student services and pre-school said. "Teen Court is designed to do that.
