The Unbound (The Archived #2)(2) Victoria Schwab. A keyhole. A door to the Narrows. I run my fingers over the small, dark spot, hesitating a moment. The walls between worlds used to feel like they were made of stone—heavy and impenetrable. These days, they feel too thin. The secrets, lies, and monsters bleed through, ruining the clean lines.

The Unbound (The Archived #2)Victoria Schwab. The Unbound (The Archived #2) ONE. MY BODY BEGS for sleep. I sit on the roof of the Coronado, and it pleads with me, begs me to climb down from my perch on the gargoyle's broken shoulder, to creep back inside and down the stairs and through the still-dark apartment into my bed—to sleep. But I can't.

The Unbound (The Archived #2)(58) Victoria Schwab “Do you?” she says, rounding her chair. “Do you truly know what you're suggesting? Voids are tears in the world. Every time one is created, it puts the Outer and the Archive at risk. As such, the intentional creation of one is punishable by alteration. And you think that a member of Crew ...

The Unbound (The Archived #2)(22) Victoria Schwab “Where are we going?” I ask under my breath. Roland doesn't answer, only leads me out of the aisle and down the sixth hall that branches off the atrium. The Archive is a network of mismatched spaces, branching and intersecting in a system only the Librarians seem able to comprehend. Every ...

The Archived/The Unbound, Victoria Schwab. The Archived The silliest things shatter you. A T-shirt discovered behind the washing machine. A toy that rolled under a cabinet in the garage, forgotten until someone drops something and goes to fetch it, and suddenly they're on the concrete floor sobbing into a dusty baseball mitt. M. 1
